Martin Grams Jr. : Information Please before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Information Please:

Information Please, the popular radio quiz program that played experts for fall guys, was capital, dependable, adult radio fun for more than a decade (1938-1952). The fast-cracking experts John Kieran, omniscient sports columnist for the New York Times; Franklin Pierce Adams, New York Post columnist; Oscar Levant, composer, pianist, gag-stacked Broadway farer were acknowledged by listeners as the most knowing of know-it-alls. Master of Ceremonies Clifton Fadiman was famous for beating the experts to the pun while he picked the questions submitted each week by listeners. Information Please spawned a short-lived series of film shorts (1940-1943), a summer-run television program (1952), at least two card games, and the long-running Information Please Almanac. This audiobook includes: Documentary on the making of the broadcasts, and background production Sponsor and cast contracts are reprinted Day-by-day information about the 1945 Information Please European tour. Chapter documenting the history of the 18 RKO Information Please shorts (1939-1942). Chapter documenting the short-lived 1952 television series.
